To book Paul to attend the funeral, or if you have any queries or wish to vary these terms, feel free to contact Paul.

Taking photographs of a funeral is unusual and could be upsetting to some people. You should ensure that the senior members of the family all agree to this. As a matter of courtesy, and to prevent misunderstandings, the mourners and the Funeral Directors should be informed.

Notes:

As regards our prices, photographers often find that people base the value of a photograph merely on the cost of a print in the local shops or the paper and ink to print it. But there is so much more that goes into producing lasting images for you and your family.

To get to this level of skill, Paul has spent time in education and training to learn the craft, over the years spent many hours practising his photography and editing the photographs. Additionally he has spent thousands of pounds on quality equipment to take the photographs, edit them on his computer and safely store the results.

Each image produced is the result of hours of preparation and work before, during and after the portrait session. It is these factors, not the material costs, that determines the prices.

Copyright:

Please note: as is the custom, and the legal status, copyright of the photographs remain with the photographer. Variation to these terms of use can be negotiated.

Copying prints or web images:

Please do not copy any print, CD or web image supplied by Paul. This is not permitted for two reasons: i) You are very unlikely to get the same quality of print from a copy – Paul does not want his work to be shown as substandard. ii) You are depriving Paul of income that allows him to run his business and get some return on the investment of both time and money that went into the making of the photograph in the first place.
